The Virginia Campaign

The harmony and enthusiasm of the Republican State Convention in Virginia and the decisive preference by which the candidate for Governor was nominated render the opening of the campaign remarkably successful and promising.

The mutations of politics have seldom been more strikingly illustrated than by the fact that the son of Henry A. Wise, the Democratic Governor of Virginia who signed the death warrant of John Brown, is now the Republican candidate for Governor of that State, on a platform insisting upon the equal civil and political rights of all its citizens without regard to race or color.

Hon. John Sergeant Wise, who has just been so flatteringly nominated, is less than forty years of age, having been born at Rio de Janiero, Dec. 25, 1846, while his father was United States Minister to Brazil. He was educated at the Virginia Military Institute and Institute of Virginia, and studied law. He was fifteen years of age at the outbreak of the rebellion, but served as lieutenant in the Provisional Confederate Army. In 1882 he was appointed U. S. District Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, which office he resigned to accept the position of Congressman at large in the Forty-eighth Congress, to which he was elected as a Readjuster by 90,982 votes against 94,184 votes for John F. Massey, Independent Democrat, and 4,342 for John M. Dawson, straight out Republican.

In the Forty-eighth Congress Mr. Wise developed brilliant qualities as a debater, and on several occasions attracted marked attention by his directness and eloquence. There have been few more thrilling episodes in Congress than that when Representative Hurd of Michigan, in the Fitz John Porter debate appealed to the ex-Confederates to say whether they really felt that they could fairly and justly vote on such a question and Mr. Wise rose and requested five minutes to reply which was courteously yielded when the young Virginian, with a fervor and intensity that cannot be described, spoke as follows:

I thank the gentleman from Michigan for the opportunity here and now to place myself on record in regard to this controversy. And I speak for myself alone, not as a Confederate General or as skilled in the science of war but as a boy who at seventeen years of age, loved the Confederate cause, saw no flint upon its banner followed it, shed his blood for it, and thought he was right. I speak to-day so help me God without one thought of treason and loving fearlessly that hand over your head, as dearly as did Daniel Webster when he apostrophized it, as you will remember. (Applause.)

I speak, however, as one who as he heard this debate, has felt that his mind wandered out from it, despite himself, and was back with the graves of the Confederate dead. I say again, sir, the propriety of the suggestion made by the gentleman from Michigan. I appeal to the Confederate soldiers here to know whether, in this discussion, has progressed instead of following the triumphs of Grant and the troubles of Porter, their minds and thoughts have not been back with the graves of their brothers and friends, and whether they do not realize that this is the most tremendous spectacle ever witnessed in the history of any land where the vanquished are called upon to cast the votes which shall decide the chance in the contested glories of their victory. (Applause.)

Mr. Chairman, for myself I accept the scene as presented. I turn from this scene with irrepressible sadness as one in which I properly have no participation. I see the panoramic of the past once more rolling before me. I feel once more as if we were back in the bloody angle of the Wilderness or gasping in the smoke and sulphurous vapor of the crater. The blood of Gettysburg is red once more. The tears of Appomattox flow again. The spectre from out the lost cause beckons me away from this controversy as one in which I have no part.

And so my brethren of the North, aye, brethren, without one tinge of bitterness, while you are deciding who was the Achilles who the Diomedes, who the Ajax, I leave to you the triumphant as I pray to be set aside.

It is no controversy of mine. My thoughts shall stray back, meanwhile, to the camp of the conquered, where the silent sentries keep their watch across the river and the Confederate dead are sleeping beneath the shadows of the trees. (Applause.)

His readiness and force in debate had another illustration during the same session, in February 1884, in a debate on Virginia politics. A few days before S. S. Cox had spoken of himself as "a monument" and Mr. Wise said he would not "call him a pillar of brass by day and a pillar of gas by night, to lead the wandering tribes of latter-day Democracy out of the desert in which they have been lost, to these many years."

Mr. Cox took occasion a day or two later to resent this humorous allusion, and in the course of his remarks, indiscriminately likened Wise and his party which had been defeated in Virginia, as "the Egyptian Readjusters who were overwhelmed by the peculiar Red Sea of that Commonwealth." Mr. Wise who had just entered, promptly arose, and after a few words of studied courtesy to Mr. Cox, turned toward him and with most impressive voice and gesture reminded him that the only sea that overwhelmed the Coalition party of Virginia, the only sea that ever could, or ever would overwhelm it, was the "Red Sea of BLOOD, shed by Bourbonism." This salient allusion to the Danville massacre, then fresh in the minds of members, was greeted with a ringing outburst of applause on the Republican side of the chamber.

The foregoing citations will serve to show that the young standard bearer of the Republican campaign in Virginia is qualified to make warm work for the Bourbons of that State. He knows them and their record and methods thoroughly, and will throw himself into the canvass with the utmost energy. The hearty acquiescence of his principal competitor, Attorney General Blair, and the earnest co-operation of Senators Mahone and Riddleberger, are among the many favorable and promising elements of the opening campaign.

Just at the time the Administration is trying to make the colored people believe that the Democratic party is friendly to them, it is extremely unfortunate that a prominent southern politician should take occasion to remark that while there was a disposition to recognize the colored men who acted with the Democratic party in the south, "yet the southern people were opposed to a man to their appointment as presidential postmasters." He said that "when the Senate met southern Senators would vote against any such nomination." No colored man need apply in the South.

At last the Springfield Republican is compelled to admit that "the President is not infallible and has not secured infallible advisers." This is a significant admission from "a thick and thin Cleveland organ" which has thus far steadily persisted in its attempt to pass the hypocritical pretense of this Administration for the civil service reform.

Among the numerous falsehoods circulated by the Cleveland organs, especially of the Mugwump variety, is the statement that more changes were made in the Consular service during the first four months of Gen. Garfield's administration than have been made by President Cleveland in the same time. The figures which we publish elsewhere show the falsity of this declaration. The refutation of this charge will make no difference to the aforesaid "organs," however, as they will doubtless continue to reiterate the assertion.

The New York Evening Post, that eminent "reform organ," announces with much glee that a movement has been started having for its object the removal of James Logan, a brother of Senator Logan, from a post-office in a small town in Illinois. Mr. Logan is charged with being an "offensive partisan," but the one charge that is particularized against him is that he permitted pictures of Blaine and Logan to be hung in his office. As it is in such a case the absurdity of the "offensive partisan" business in this case. It is also announced that the principal applicant for the office is the Chairman of the Democratic Campaign Committee in that district. This is a fair sample of the hypocrisy the Post indorses as civil service reform.

RAID ON THE CONSULSHIPS.

NO REPORT IN SECRETARY BAYARD'S OFFICE—A COMPARISON BETWEEN PRESIDENT GARFIELD'S AND THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION—OFFICES GIVEN TO DEMOCRATIC HEAD HUNTERS.

Washington Correspondence of the Portland Press.

Democratic newspapers and a few of their allies attempt to excuse and justify the Democratic raid on the Consular service. Since the 4th of March there have been a wholesale decapitation of faithful public and experienced officers in order to make places for hungry and needy utterly ignorant of the duties which they will be required to perform. The experienced men are discharged because they are Republicans and the inexperienced men are employed solely because they have been active Democratic partisans and have thus brought Democratic Senators, Representatives, National Committeemen and other influential members of their party to their aid. Despite every pretence and profession of devotion to the principles of administrative reform on the part of the President and his Cabinet such debts have to be paid and Secretary Bayard insists that settlements in liquidation shall be made as promptly as practicable.

Some of the fresh apologists of the Administration, who are willing to excuse although they dare not undertake to defend the President's wanton disregard of the public welfare, have showed by their discriminate removal of faithful officers content themselves by the wild assertion that during the four months of President Garfield's Administration many removals of competent and experienced officials and Consular officers took place and that as many inexperienced men were appointed to such offices as rewards of personal and partisan service, as during the first four months of Mr. Cleveland's Administration. It is difficult to say which the dense ignorance or glaring misrepresentation predominates in this very specious plea.

THE ORIGINAL MISSIONS.

What are the facts? President Garfield appointed six Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary as follows: Levi P. Morton to France, William Walter Phelps to Austria, Hampton Hamlin to Spain, Judson Kilpatrick to Chili, Stephen A. Hurlbut to Peru, Lewis Wallace to Turkey. Mr. Hamlin had been four years Vice-President of the United States and had served in Congress for a quarter of a century. General Kilpatrick, General Wallace and General Hurlbut had all achieved distinction and won the rank of Major-General by service in the Union armies during the Rebellion. General Hurlbut also had filled the Colombian mission acceptably.

Mr. Phelps and Mr. Morton had both been representatives in Congress. Mr. Phelps was appointed to a vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. Kasson, who had been elected to Congress and had entered the lists as candidate for the Speakership of the House of Representatives. General Kilpatrick was appointed to a vacancy caused by the promotion of Minister Osborn from the Chilian to the Brazilian Mission. Minister Fairchild was recalled from Madrid in response to a long urgent and repeated requests and Mr. Hamlin was appointed to succeed him. General Wallace was appointed to succeed Minister Morgan who had applied for the office of United States Marshal in Georgia and asked to be recalled from Turkey. This it appears that four of the six appointments were necessary to fill vacancies.

Between March 4 and July 1 President Cleveland made thirteen appointments of Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary besides those of General Lawton and Governor Blackburn, who declined, and that of Major Kelley to Italy. Of the thirteen men appointed four had served in the rebel army and one was a Colonel in the Union army until President Lincoln issued the proclamation of emancipation, in January, 1863. Several of the northern candidates for diplomatic honors had been notorious copperheads.

The men appointed and the countries to which they are accredited are as follows: Edward J. Phelps, to Great Britain; Robert McLane, to France; George H. Pendleton, to Germany; George V. N. Lothrop, to Russia; Henry R. Jackson to Mexico; Charles Denby, to China; Thomas J. Jarvis, to Brazil; John B. Stallo to Italy; Anthony M. Keiley, to Austria; Richard B. Hubbard, to Japan; Samuel S. Cox, to Turkey; Charles W. Buck to Peru; William R. Roberts, to Chili.

SECOND RATE MISSIONS.

Of Ministers Resident President Garfield appointed three, as follows: H. S. Garrett, Liberia; George Manly, Colombia; George W. Calter, Venezuela. Mr. Garrett did not take office and Minister Smyth was just recalled. President Cleveland has appointed three Ministers Resident, as follows: Hufer Minger, Sweden and Norway; George W. Merrill, Hawaii; Isaac Bell, Jr., Netherlands.

President Garfield made no appointments to the office of Minister Resident and Consul General. President Cleveland has appointed eight, as follows: Charles L. Scott, Venezuela; Barlas W. Hanna, Argentine Republic; Boyd Winchester, Switzerland; William A. Seay, Bolivia; Walker Fearn, Roumania, etc.; E. P. C. Lewis, Portugal; John E. W. Thompson, Hayti; Rasmus B. Anderson, Denmark. Four of these men had served in the Confederate army.

President Garfield appointed one Charge d'Affaires and President Cleveland has appointed one. The Republican official was Charles Payson, who was promoted from the office of Third Assistant Secretary of State to fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of M. J. Cramer, a brother-in-law of General Grant, from Denmark to Switzerland, where there was a vacancy caused by the resignation of Nicholas Fish, who felt that the experience he had acquired in the diplomatic service deserved the reward of promotion. He was subsequently appointed to the Belgian Mission, and is soon to be superseded by a man wholly destitute of diplomatic experience or knowledge. President Cleveland has appointed as Charge d'Affaires, John E. Bacon, of South Carolina, who has been sent to Paraguay.

CONSULS-GENERAL.

President Garfield appointed six Consuls-General, as follows: E. A. Merritt, London; Hans Mattson, Calcutta; Mark S. Brewer, Berlin; Fred Vogeler, Frankfort, Germany; Lewis Richmond, Hong Kong; Simon Wolf, Cairo. Mr. Richmond was promoted from the Belgian consulate, where he had served acceptably and Mr. Wolf was appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the promotion of Consul-General Farman, of Cairo, to a judgeship of the International Court in Egypt. General Merritt succeeded General Badeau, who was appointed Charge d'Affaires at Copenhagen, an office which he declined. He was subsequently appointed Consul-General at Havana.

Between March 4 and July 1 President Cleveland appointed twelve Consuls-General, exactly twice as many as President Garfield had named in a like period, and they were: H. Clay Armstrong, Rio Janeiro; Thomas M. Waller, London; Pierce M. B. Young, St. Petersburg; Edmund Jussen, Vienna; Warren Greene, Kanagawa; Frederick Raine, Berlin; Ephraim B. Ewing, Mexico City; Michael H. Phelan, Halifax; Wm. L. Alden, Rome; Jacob Mueller, Frankfort-on-Main; James M. Morgan, Melbourne; Wendell A. Anderson, Montreal. All these men are utterly lacking in experience or knowledge of their duties.

THE CONSULS.

According to the registers of the State Department President Garfield appointed twenty-seven new salaried Consuls and commercial agents. The appointment of Mr. Collier to Leipsic was cancelled, and Consul Montgomery, who was to have been transferred to Brussels, remained at Leipsic. Of the other twenty-six new appointments five were to fill existing vacancies, four of which had been caused by promotion, while one was to fill an original vacancy. Mr. Wood was given the Belfast Consulate by promotion from the Consular Bureau of the State Department, as the head of which he had done good service and acquired a thorough knowledge of Consular duties. Besides the twenty-six new appointments there were five promotions of Consuls who were in the service at the beginning of President Garfield's Administration, including Mr. Wood, the ratio of promotions to new appointments was greater than one to three.

Between March 4 and July 2 Secretary Bayard appointed—not including Dr. McCulloch—forty-nine new salaried Consuls and Commercial Agents. With perhaps three exceptions all joined in the hunt wholly without experience or knowledge of Consular duties. One of the exceptions is Arthur B. Wood, who is promoted from the Belfast Consulate with a salary of $1,000 a year, to the Dundee Consulate at $2,500 a year, to make room for Geo. W. Savage of New Jersey.

COMPARATIVE EXHIBIT.

A comparison of the number and aggregate yearly salaries of the Diplomatic and Consular officers appointed during President Garfield's brief Administration when Mr. Blaine was at the head of the State Department with the number and aggregate yearly salaries of like officers appointed in the period during which Mr. Bayard has been at the head of the State Department under a Democratic President who professes the warmest devotion to the principles of Civil Service Reform, is not altogether uninteresting and suggestive. It is as follows:

	Number appointed	Aggregate yearly salaries	Number appointed	Aggregate yearly salaries
	March 4 to July 1, 1881		March 4 to July 1, 1885
Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary	11	$[illegible]	6	$[illegible]
Ministers Resident	1	[illegible]	3	[illegible]
Ministers Resident	1	[illegible]	0	[illegible]
Charge d'Affaires	1	[illegible]	1	[illegible]
Consuls-General	8	[illegible]	12	[illegible]
Consuls	40	[illegible]	49	[illegible]
	62	$150,500	71	$181,000

At the present rate it will not take Mr. Bayard many months to fill the consular service, with new and inexperienced men and to deprive the country of the services of faithful officials who during the last eight years under the direction and encouragement of Republican administrations have raised that service to a degree of efficiency never before attained. It will not be long to break up a Consular service which has been carefully recruited and steadily improved, and which on the 4th of March compared favorably with the consular service of any other nation.

While the Mugwump and so-called civil service reform "organs" continue to stultify themselves by indorsing the soft-shell partisan scheme it is interesting to note that the Washington Post (Dem.) condemns the cowardly policy now in force and for the third time takes occasion to express its disapproval. The Post says:

The now hackneyed cry of "offensive partisanship" has become a mere scandal and pretext. It has outgrown the dignity of its author and become an unmanly, ageless quibble instead of an instrument of good. It has served as a means of persecution, false and cowardly. Employed to further personal revenge to wreak injury upon the innocent to divert attention from the guilty and to serve the ends of spoilsmen, it has kept its rather than of honest and upright government. It ought to be stricken from the vocabulary of the Cleveland Administration, as it has already been from that of every fair minded and equity-loving citizen.

Providence is irresistibly still to be all of the heaviest guns. This is more than in the olden time when little old David slew the first recruit of a thousand and tenfold mighty.

Providence also is by the man who invests his money in wisdom, charity and kindness and gets it all back with compound interest.

No money is better spent than that to secure or renew a Life Policy. This directs it the old proverb says a spender of all is treasurer.—Adv.

A Hot Day but the General Comfortable.

The thermometer at the cottage registered morning 80 degrees during the day but though the General has perspired quite freely it is not he has not been appreciably weakened by the heat. The greater part of the day was spent on the piazza. The patient retired at 8 o'clock with indications pointing to a good night. The quiet enjoyed upon the General this week has benefitted him physically, but it is thought that he would be happier and more contented with some occupation for his mind, since the interdict of the physicians against mental occupation has to-day been removed and the sick man told that should he at any time desire to do any literary work it may gratify himself. It is not unlikely that the General may prepare a magazine article or do some literary work in the way of reminiscences which have not yet been incorporated in his book. The mercury was at 72° at the cottage when the General retired.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Investigation of Irish Murder Cases.

LONDON, July 17. Mr. Parnell moved this afternoon in the House of Commons that the Government order a special inquiry into the Maamtrasna murder cases. Mr. Parnell made a long speech in support of his motion. He dwelt on the maladministration of the criminal law in Ireland under Spencer, where innocent persons have been, in some cases, condemned and executed and others sentenced to life-long terms of penal servitude. He moved, therefore, that in the opinion of the House it was the duty of the Government to institute strict inquiry into the evidence and surroundings in the Maamtrasna, Ballinville, Crossmaglen and Castle Island murder cases.

Wm. Joseph Corbett, Home Rule member for Wicklow Bury, seconded the motion of Mr. Parnell and said he hoped that the government would take a lesson from their predecessors, when the Parnellite vote will be deprived of office.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said the present Government had nothing to say in defense of the late Government. He was, however, authorized by Earl Cairnavan, the present Lord-Lieut. of Ireland, to say that the present Irish executive will make a careful personal inquiry into the subject submitted by Mr. Parnell, but must add that the Government felt themselves compelled to ask the House to resist Mr. Parnell's motion, which was derogatory of Earl Spencer, a member of the late Government.

Mr. Parnell's motion was negatived without a division.

A STORY OF AN OLD SOLDIER.

[San Francisco Inglesido.]

"What has become of Lenoir?

"Yes, where is Lenoir?

The phalanx of solid business men, comprising the bulk of the membership of Garland Post No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, had regarded as a downright grievance a call to attend a meeting for the transaction of special business appointed at the close of the morning hour, two in the afternoon. They had responded to the order with protest like unto that of the prize sheep when an absentee is hunted at the bucks in their daily routine of instant consulted their watches with the air of men who were expecting important engagements and when the meeting at length adjourned gathered into cosey knots to discuss the strange tidings for the remarkable that attended the revival of old Lenoir memories.

The first speaker, Eli Brewster, was a lumber merchant who had acquired extensive tracts of land covered with a forest growth second only to the big trees of the Calaveras and Mariposa groves. He had so prospered in his business ventures that his name had become identified with the natural product he ruled in the commercial world, and he had gained the sobriquet of the Prince of Redwood. He had lately purchased a large piece of land at the foot of Sixth street, including within its boundaries the ancient and classic ruins of the old Mission Creek, known as the dumps, where the Italian scavengers had from time immemorial deposited the contents of their carts and raked the putrid and decaying masses of paper, scraps of cloth and other articles of commerce, as well as the pieces of the beneficently dipped into the ash barrel by careless servants. Mission Creek, at high tide, is for a rod or rods a navigable stream, and it was generally conceded that Brewster's branch railway, sheared and narrow, and would soon turn the tide of traffic from the crowded thoroughfare of Stewart street. The Prince of Redwood himself had felt all the glow of a prudent man, and had never lost confidence of his own sagacity, but a recent interview in the underwriters' office had somewhat disturbed the security with which he had hitherto allowed his new acquisition. Meeting some old comrades, men of his own regiment who had fought side by side with him through the four years of the civil war, he had told the prophecies of the day and plunged with eager zest into an animated discussion of past campaigns in the course of which he made the inquiry that heads this chapter. The question was repeated by an echoing chorus.

"Lenoir? The speaker who volunteered a reply was one of a number of that very agreeable and highly entertaining class of individuals who are commonly credited with the possession of encyclopedic knowledge, and whose information is about as diffuse and inexact as the strange encyclopedia of geography. Lenoir, he did just as he left, was mustered out in Texas. Broke with all up for a while, he had rallied and went down to Florida, invested in an orange grove and lived on the fat of the land.

He was an old fellow—four, he remarked, a gray haired veteran who endeavored to recruit his resources by the sale of powder and cold steel to the lounging gum shop in Bush street.

Odd there was no rubber fellow in the service. He was the rubber if ever one existed. Brewster spoke with such unwonted energy that the others looked at him in surprise, for he was generally regarded as a phlegmatic character. He could be depended on to attend a meeting for the transaction of special business appointed at the close of the morning hour, two in the afternoon. They had responded to the order with protest like unto that of the prize sheep when an absentee is hunted at the bucks in their daily routine of instant consulted their watches with the air of men who were expecting important engagements and when the meeting at length adjourned gathered into cosey knots to discuss the strange tidings for the remarkable that attended the revival of old Lenoir memories.
